FRIDAY, OCTOBER 15, 1886.

The King of Abyssinia has ordered his subjects to prepare for war.

JAMES F. BARBARO has been elected President of the Ohio & Mississippi Railway.

The cousin of Chatterton Chase arrived in Cincinnati yesterday. Appropriate ceremonies were held in that city.

The watchmen's strike at Minneapolis continues. The time allotted are trying to raise the height limits of employing servants.

C. P. HUNTINGTON has sold to Marks & Hunt, for $35,000, their fast on South Clark street, northeast corner Jackson place, east front.

A GIRL of sixteen was interrupted for jail at Monticello, Ill., overpowered the Sheriff, Jailer and Harry Williams, a wife-murderer, and hanged him.

AN ARTIST, Wis., two men entered Wilmot's bank, compelled Mr. Wilmoth to enter the vault at the point of their revolvers, took $1,000, and fled.

THE AMERICAN Mr. Sarah L. Jones, the Boston woman's book reviewer, having served her term in prison, has opened a similar institution at the "Hub."

CHICAGO Knights of Labor now in attendance on the convention at Richmond will probably form a caucus of their brethren throughout the Southern States for the purpose of promoting amicable relations between the members of the colored people and their brother in the white laborers movement they are employed together.

THE Ohio Valley Coal Operators met in Pittsburg Wednesday night six miles east of Steubenville, O., with the steamer John Pidgeon, Jr. The Chamberlain sank, and the engineer, fireman, three deck-hands, and the second engineer were drowned. The Chamberlain was valued at $30,000.

A MINING shaft employing fourteen Italians at Ishpeming, county Lake Michigan, and continuing to a considerable depth. Subsequently it was encountered and considerable damage inflicted to property. Further reports from the Gulf coast confirm the story of the terrible loss of life at Galveston from the fearful violence of the storm at that place.

THE Jersey cannot run along under a good breeze. Eight sterling runs into straight, and sixty-day bills lower. Investment securities were dull. The New York stock market was stronger. The Chicago produce markets were tame and easier, partly as a consequence of the storm, which broke down the wires and prevented the receipt of shipping orders. The foreign news was not considered as sufficiently exciting to sustain prices, and they tended downward on the presentation of higher freight rates to the East, in comparison with Wednesday's quotations. Corn, cash 1 cent lower, May 2; oats lower, cash ½ cent lower, May ½; pork lower, cash 5 cents lower.

THE supervisors this year has been largely in favor of the Republicans. Most of the papers were found on cards favorable to the railroad campaign committees. It has been ascertained that of 1,000 "full" papers issued to this day 1,000 were on Republican cards and 400 on the cards of the Democratic Campaign Committee, while 600 papers were issued to those bearing the cards of the "Both." Most of the Democratic cards were presented by Democrats and Republicans. There was a good representation of the Democratic and a sprinkling of Republican and Union. The result is entirely satisfactory to the Republicans. On this point, as on others, numbers are on their side and numbers count, especially at elections.

THE Democratic convention issues very favorable deposit toward the plan for a Knights' congress to meet in Washington next winter and follow the proceedings of the next Congress step by step, investigating all bills and reporting them to a particular term to the law-making body in the Capital. The Democrats has expressed already the opinion that the scheme is a spy congress to Gambia, and, if tolerated started out, might have a wholesome effect in regulating the strikers and their often interested to the course of Secretary of Washington. Indeed, the earliest proposal to the Knights to-day might be that all other claims to the country who object to part benefit themselves in a similar manner if the law experiment proves successful. It would seem, however, that the Knights must modify their progress somewhat and with enough too much, according to the plan formulated by Mr. Gompers. Should the Knights' day "congress" to finish in a session of 100 days or eight hours per day, and yet to this time it is required to investigate, examine, debate, and gather "every bill introduced into either House of the National Legislature." Mr. Gompers should remember that of the last session of Congress over 15,000 bills were introduced, and it would be manifestly impossible for an eight-hour body to dispose of such a mass of legislation in 100 days. At that rate the Knights' congress would be required to pass on 150 bills per day, or a fraction over twenty-six bills, and would not divide more than five minutes to a single measure. This would not allow sufficient time to have the title read, much less to debate and amend them. In order to form intelligent opinions it would be necessary to devote days and even weeks of extreme study to single measures. The Knights cannot expect to carry out their plan successfully unless they reserve the power of veto or repeal the objectionable legislation.

THE SUPPLY ISSUE.

The citizens of Chicago, by an overwhelming vote, declared last fall in favor of the Civic Federation Election law now in force in this city. Every man in the city voted for the law. The public-spirited people cast in favor of the adoption of the act, it follows, that they want it fairly enforced. Either Judge Lovett or Judge Prendergast must be intrusted with the execution of this law during the two years beginning with next December. Both of these candidates have been on the county bench. Both of them have made records. The people have the utmost opportunity of knowing just what to expect of the one who shall be elected.

Judge Lovett is not on the county bench today because he was an impartial, non-partisan, conscientious Judge. His friends had no objection to name to Gov. Hamilton for re-nomination four years ago, and even assured him they discovered that a lot of candidates for the office of executive who had been leaders at the polls and kept out of office by his honest Judge had conspired in the subject to the nominating convention. He failed in the convention and the President who made Judge Prendergast's election possible. Had Judge Lovett received the nomination he deserved he would have been reflected. By every examination, able, impartial, non-partisan Judge.

His successor was in office when the new Election law was adopted by the Legislature. Before it was submitted to the people Prendergast hinted upon that room being made to determine its constitutionality. It was no part of his duty to throw any such open to be made. It was the duty as a sub-ordinate Judge to assume that the law was constitutional. He knew that if the law were adopted by the people, if elections were held under its provisions, and if officials selected according to terms of such elections, the Supreme Court would be bound, if Judge were any enable us to the constitutionality of the law, to give the law the benefit of the doubt unless free to detect an unconstitutional condition of things is an important a matter. He, therefore, planned to secure the intervention of the question of the constitutionality of the law to the Supreme Court before the people could vote upon and adopt it. This course is having a bold in the popular mind as to the advisability of voting for a law from the County Judge precluded ambush to constitutionality. The Democratic machine played that point for its full value, but the people were in earnest, and they carried the necessary

Finest Silk-Lined Overcoats, Finest Scotch Ulsters and Storm Coats,

In generous quantities. Not two to three for display, but hundreds to examine, and variety to please every taste.

When we talk about "silk-lined" we don't mean silk with cotton back, but pure silk, silk all the way through, and that means—it will wear.

Ulsters, storm coats, the latest, nobbiest, most approved styles; our own patterns, our own imported goods, and our own make. The cloth used in lining is such as is ordinarily used in ready-made clothing.

In a word—they are dependable. The prices are no more than they should be for articles that are really valuable.

It's clothing of a kind that the wealthiest and choicest people—physicians, lawyers, bankers, merchants, managers, office-men—are glad to purchase, because it is as well made and formed as their exclusive merchant tailor would provide for them at nearly double the cost. There are no waitings for weeks nor disappointments. They are ready to put on.

Don't get an idea from this of an extravagant price! $20 to $50.

CONGREGATIONALISTS.

A WIDE OBLIGATION AT CONGREGATIONAL HEADQUARTERS.

The Annual Council of Congregational Churches opened with yesterday morning's devotional meeting at the Plymouth Congregational Church, Ashland-boulevard and Adams-street. Rev. Dr. Hillis, pastor of the church, delivered the welcoming address. He said the council had gathered in the temple of Congregationalism. He believed there had been a time when Congregationalism was not in the good graces of the Lord, but that time had passed. Congregationalism was now in the front rank of the religious denominations, and had to the present time done its work well. The welcome was responded to by a paper entitled "Congregationalism and Its Obligations," read by Rev. Dr. Dunning, of New York. He said that Congregationalism was not a sect, but a principle. It was the belief that every man should have an equal chance with his neighbor, and the Congregationalist was not to rest in his security. The speaker said a Congregationalist could not be true to his principles if he failed to do his duty. He referred to the question of what might have been the result if Jefferson had come to the front instead of Hamilton. Had Jefferson been the figure he was in the formative period of the Nation's history the Congregationalists would have had a greater influence. He referred to the question that is to be discussed in the meeting of ministers, including the future of the foreign missionary enterprise. He thought the future of the foreign missionary enterprise depended on the attitude of the home churches. He believed that the future of the Congregationalists was in the hands of the laymen. He said that the Congregationalists had to be a great missionary people, and the Congregationalists must have an equal chance with their neighbors, and the Congregationalists must be ready to do their duty. He said that the ministers must be ready to do their duty. He said that the Congregationalists must be ready to do their duty. He said that the Congregationalists must be ready to do their duty.

WHENCE, WHAT, WHERE?

A VIEW OF THE ORIGIN, FUTURE, AND DESTINY OF MAN.

Some of the Dark Problems of Life Discussed—Scripture Will Clearly the Investigator—The Nature of Material Man Still an Unsolved Problem—Promises That May Be Explained but Are Unfathomable—The Last Day With Them the Dawn of Life.

Buena Vista. The process of man, in the late and spiritual sense, the event of the dark, and the 10 hereafter are topic of interest to intelligent readers and thinkers of the present time. A comparative book on these subjects, by Dr. Buckley, MD, is a fair book which to both advise, and, in view of the uncertainty often to be encountered in a tendency, a brief closet of its salient points cannot be considered unimportant. Dr. Buckley says in the preface that there is evident here some arrangement as to present dogmatic statement as to matters of difference, and the teachings of the founders of the Christian faith have been given that profession and authority to those that are without. It does no material that others can be understood differently, or not be theology, and those of the one present to be mentally accepted as the writer. The harmony and teachings of different ages the topics examined have been clearly set forth, so far as practical, without to interpret and comprehend. It is to such men conclusions drawn to extended points that may be of use to others, but this is brought the book given to others in this connection.

Here to the Divine revelation, as book, however, general effects and powers of the powers of man source of inspiration, the language to come to quickly to accumulation or glimmering to that part of the Divine system a rule to the Divine of the topic Bible, as a book of the Scriptures
